BODY FOUND IN THE CONNECTICUT.

Discovered Yesterday Morning Among the Logs Which Are Jammed Against the Pier-Undoubtedly That of Miss Lula Manley Who Was Drowned Near North Hartland

A body which is undoubtedly that of Miss Lula Manley, aged 14, who was drowned about three weeks ago in the Connecticut river at a point near North Hartland, was discovered yesterday morning caught among the logs which are jammed against the pier of the tell bridge. Several boys were playing on the logs at a point about in the rear of the fown hall when one of the rear of the fown hall when one of them discovered the body lying face down among the logs. He immedi-ately notified the logmen who are en-camped on the island and after dinner with the assistance of Undertaker Moran the body was extracted from the jam and laid upon the logs until the Hiesells authorities gave remission Hinsdale authorities gave permission for its removal. It was then taken to Moran's undertaking rooms and sent to North Hartland on the late train.

The body was in such a bruised condition from coming in contact with the logs that the features were unrec-ognizable, but the log drivers believed it to be that of Miss Mauley from descriptions they had previously received, A message was at once sent to North Hartland and a description of the clothing which was worn by the girl when she was drowned tallied closely with that which was on the body.

Miss Manley was the daughter of Edson L. Manley of North Hartland. In company with another young wo-man she was playing in a boat which and is supposed to have wandered into the woods.
